Recovering the Classics- Call for Artists!

Every great book deserves a great cover. Many classic books, however, are seriously failing to capture the imaginations of new readers. This is where you come in. We're asking for you, the talented residents of Boone County to submit your new designs for a book that is in the public domain.

A public domain book is a book with no copyright, a book that was created without a license, or a book where its copyrights expired or have been forfeited. Every book written prior to 1923 is in the public domain. (You can find a full list at bcpl.org)

Boone County Public Library is holding its own Recovering the Classics Contest and we invite you to participate by creating a cover for a classic book. All submissions will be judged by a panel of local artists. One winning book cover will be chosen from each of the following categories:

Child (grades K-5)

Teen (grades 6-12)

Adult

Covers will be displayed at the Main Library April 3rd through May 31st.

Winners in each category will receive a physical copy of their chosen book with their art as the cover! Contest rules and entry forms will be available at all BCPL locations and our website, beginning January 15th. Entries can be dropped off at any BCPL location by MARCH 1st, 2018, with an accompanying entry form.

Artwork may be in any two-dimensional (flat) medium with the following criteria:

- Vertically oriented 11x17 image
- Depict the front cover of one of the listed titles in a bold, engaging way
- Prominently display the book's title and the author's full name
- No margins or borders
- All text should be at least 1" from the edge
